It was a trip I'll never forget. It happened last year in September. Me and my wife decided to take a break from work without letting anyone know, because we couldn't take one officially at that time, and make a field trip. It looks bizarre, but the reason was, in a nutshell, to spend more time with our daughter, to show her that we ~~didn't~~ ^{aren't} forgot her.

Let me introduce you my wife and my daughter. The wife is a kind sort of woman, she always supports her relatives and tries to cheer me up if I'm moody, ^{and} my daughter ~~is~~ is very active and happy girl. She was in such bewildering state about our trip, "We are going to the nature!"

Although it was challenging for us, ^{because} ~~because~~ our carriers were at state, but everything was O.K. in the end. We had such a good time showing our daughter the wonders of nature, making little picnic and just breathing clean air. When we returned no one argued at us. Wife's director was important of trip, and my was confused, but after my explanation he said, "It's a good choice to risk your carrier for ^{the} sake of family, I understand" - and let me be.

And also, understand one thing. Our goals and routes are nothing if you're forgetting something important for every human: his family.
