It was a trip I'll never forget. Back when I was a little girl my mom used to take me onto bewildering adventures in the vast mountains our area was surrounded with. I didn't quite dig those, though. But now that I think of it, our trips were often bizzare. I was an ill-minded child, arrogant and unintrested in anything most certainly.

So just as we were about to set off for a get another obligatory adventure I noticed that this wasn't going to be an common trip. Our SUV was packed with lots off equipment and there was another man in the car. I was more than confused. The guy, which was wearing a stupid-looking beanie, was in his thirties and his face seemed familiar to me.

„Hi, Jane I'm Bob" - he said.

„Yeah, whatever" - I shot.

Mom came back with more backpacks, filled with outdoorsman junk.

„Oh, I see you've already got to know each other. Bob is going to be our guide"

And so we drove off into the mountains. I've noticed that we weren't taking the ordinary route we go by. But still, I wasn't looking forward to whatever was coming. When we arrived at the destination I realised that my jeans, sweater and a scarf didn't quite fit the weather, let alone for climbing a massive cliff. But I kept the silence since I was still kind of miffed about being taken outside. We dressed into the climbing instructor equipment that was at our disposal.

„You girls ready?" - asked the instructor with a smile.

I found it challenging at first, but soon enough I got a hang of it. It was a fun weekend. In the end we had hot chocolate and cookies. Only on our way home I realised that the instructor was my dad that came back from Iraq.
