MUSEUM ATTENDANCE
IN 2013-2017

Introduction

The aim of the following report is to evaluate and summarize the data on national English museums' and galleries' visitation and give recommendations for further improvements.

Visitation rate in 2013 and 2015

From the chart it is evident that the museum attendance has severely changed since the year 2013. In two years visits to the art galleries has respectively increased. On the contrary, the amount of people visiting science museums dropped. This can be explained by the cancelling of the free entrance in 2014.

Visitation rate in 2015 and 2017

Regarding the change of attendance in 2017, it can be concluded that it was not as dramatic as previously. The substantial number of visitors in art galleries slightly increased. However, there was not any drastic change. On the other hand, the visitation to science museums changed its tendency in 2017. It did go up.

Recommendations & Conclusion

Few possible improvements have been investigated. First of all, authorities' attention should be drawn on to the problem of admission charge. In order to cancel the fee, fundraising campaign should be organised. This way, the interest of public in science museums will drastically increase. More than that, each museum should represent something that appeals to every group of population. For instance, art galleries could organise special art classes for kids. As a result, visitation will become versatile. If all of these recommendations are to be applied the visitation will continue to grow.
