The Venice of Software and Art

The Russian Federation is a vast country full of wonders, but one city is truly worth of the title of the most beautiful city in Russia. That city is the "Venice of the North", St. Petersburg. The magnificent view is matched only by the sheer post-industrial production capacity of St. Petersburg's information technology sector.

• A city of culture

St. Petersburg has always been the "cultural capital" of Russia, and this is still true in 2070. People of the creative class call the city on the Neva river their home, and this is not uncalled for, as from its founding in 1703 the former capital of the Russian Empire was a nexus of the country's artistic power.

• Streams of both water and data

St. Petersburg was reformed into one of the first cities to have AI assistance integrated into every sphere of life back in 2059. People drive vehicles controlled by neural networks, the government is managed by a database algorithm. Even restaurants employ robotized waiters to cater to visitors. Though the system surely has its bottlenecks, obsolete hardware is being phased out in favour of newly created Russian chips.

• "Access granted"

The "Venice of the North" is truly a magni-

- TIENTE MONUMENT ... everyone should visit it at least once in ~~one's~~ ^{one's} life. St. Petersburg is open to anyone, so book your flights and prepare to be submerged into a mix of culture and technology characteristic to the city of Russian emperors. "Access granted, we come to Russia!"
